

Washington Statewide Search Instructions

The initial search in the state of Washington does not require a fingerprint card from the applicant. However, at certain times after the initial search is conducted by the State Patrol the result yields multiple Name/Date of Birth combinations on a criminal hit. The State Patrol requires fingerprints to verify the requested subject's identity against the information in their files. This additional step does not confirm that the requested subject has any derogatory information filed against them. The final results returned from the State Patrol will result in a Record Found or No Record Found based on the fingerprint results.

To obtain a fingerprint card, the applicant should contact a local policing authority and inquire about the process for obtaining fingerprints.
